Photoshop Elements Organizer: Lets you access your photos and manage your image collections and upload images to the Web and print. Photoshop Express: With Photoshop Express, you can edit your photos, add special effects, apply photomerges, and share your images in a few quick steps. Adobe Bridge: An application that lets you add photographs and videos to a document or web page. Your files are organized in albums. This chapter is restricted to the installation of Photoshop. The chapters in Book IV (Chapter 6 and Chapter 8) give detailed information on the other parts of the Photoshop Creative Suite. You need a machine with a DVD-ROM drive or a CD/DVD burner to install Photoshop. If you don't have one of these devices, you can check for a place you can download the disc image. You have the opportunity to skip some of the installation steps that are found on the screen and, instead, go right to the main menu. ### What's New In?

Iowa State University researchers first proposed a mission to Europa as part of NASA's Kepler mission, which ran for about 4 years. The mission was under consideration before NASA chose to fund it as a pathfinder for a possible Europa orbiter for which it has now selected. A NASA press release states: NASA is expected to announce the selection of Europa Clipper for development in the early 2020s. The exploration concept of a close flyby of Jupiter's moon Europa was envisioned by the late Dr. Bruce Murray and his colleagues at the Ames Research Center as one of the original NASA Kepler mission science goals. The concept has been evolving over the past few years as NASA and the European Space Agency, ESA, continue to review other proposals. "The scientists are ecstatic that we will finally get to go to Europa," said Dr. Murray, principal investigator of the $4.8 billion Europa Clipper mission concept. "Europa is a fascinating and mysterious world. We have had a tremendous amount of success at other unexplored worlds, but Europa represents the ultimate frontier in our search for life beyond Earth." Murray's team first proposed a probe to Europa in 2010, and have refined it since then. Eventually, they believe it may provide critical information about the primordial ocean that covered the moon -- information crucial to discovering whether conditions are suitable for life. The mission would launch towards the orbit of Jupiter and then use gravity assists to swing through the orbit of Europa, where it would spend about five years studying the moon. The probe would make about 45,000 revolutions around Jupiter, using Jupiter's gravity to slingshot it to Europa. It would be able to measure Europa's wind speed and current flow patterns, as well as volcanism, to determine its habitability. The spacecraft would carry a series of instruments to measure the chemistry and composition of Europa's surface, look at the subsurface under the moon's icy crust, and characterize the moon's magnetic field to search for hidden plumes of water. It also would carry an ice-penetrating radar to measure the thickness of the moon's ice crust, which is important to understanding its habitability and what may be lurking beneath. Each instrument can tell scientists about what is happening underneath Europa's surface, as well as above it, providing a broad picture of the moon's history and likely future.
