human granulocyte protease cathepsin G (cat-G) is a novel cysteine proteinase that can be activated in human polymorphonuclear neutrophils (PMNs) through cleavage of its proenzyme by the intracellular cysteine proteinase calpain. Activation of calpain occurs when the cytosolic enzyme has accumulated  $Ca^{2+}$ , as the result of respiratory burst-induced hydrolysis of the transmembrane enzyme calpastatin, which in turn accumulates when PMNs are stimulated to react by chemotactic or metabolic signals. The cathepsin G proenzyme, however, is not a calpain substrate. Here we describe the purification of cathepsin G from fresh human PMNs and the cloning of a cDNA encoding the mature protein. The cathepsin G gene, which is located on chromosome 1, contains six exons. It contains an open reading frame encoding a protein of 305 amino acids, a 5'-untranslated region of 374 nucleotides, and a 3'-untranslated region of 269 nucleotides. The proprotein contains a signal sequence of 19 amino acids, an amino-terminal propeptide of 16 amino acids, and the active proteinase domain of 185 amino acids. The mature protein has an isoelectric point of 5.7. The cathepsin G gene has seven single-base substitutions with other known human cysteine
