Download Free .Q: Update object list in Python I'm trying to append an empty list. my_list = [] my_list.append(list.empty()) The effect i expect is like this : my_list = [] my_list.append(list.empty()) print(my_list) => [[]] But it shows an error: TypeError: object.append() argument must have __len__ attribute A: Set.append(..): my_list.append([]) You already have a list [] in your dictionary, so you'll just append that, and the list() constructor will do the same thing: >>> my_list = [] >>> my_list.append(list()) >>> print(my_list) [] So let's go over what's happening here: list() creates an empty list The list() function is inbuilt, so you don't even have to import it. list() is an immutable object, so it does not have.append() This is what you're trying to do If you wanted to append a new list, use list.append() on a specific instance of list: >>> my_list = [] >>> my_list.append([]) >>> print(my_list) [] And here's the equivalent of list(), from the "list" module: >>> from __future__ import print_function >>> list() [] >>> list.append([]) >>> print(list()) [] So to sum it up, use the list.append() function on a list to append a new list. Hope that helps! A: The error you get is not because you have list.empty().append() somewhere, but you are using list.empty() in the first place, so error is because this method does not return a list, it 648931e174
