“This is the most significant shift in game physics since FIFA 15,” said Peter PENCHANSKY, Senior Gameplay Engineer, EA SPORTS FIFA. “We’ve moved to a completely new performance model that enables every player to be as reactive, accurate and responsive as the very best performers in the world.” The integration of motion capture data into the game creates exciting new opportunities for players to drive the action with remarkable realism. Players will be able to run faster, use greater variation in their ball control and tackle to dominate the ball. Motion Capture Combines Unprecedented Player Performance and Reactions In the week preceding the launch of FIFA 22, a series of football matches were filmed using a body-worn motion capture suit that records at 240 FPS and 720p HD. The new technology was developed by EA SPORTS FIFA to capture the way players truly move and the way they interact with their opponents and the ball. The best of these performances (selected by EA) were then put in the game to create the world’s most advanced motion capture technology ever seen in an EA SPORTS FIFA title. The addition of our new Motion Capture tools opens up a world of possibilities to further enhance gameplay. The motion capture data can be further manipulated into the game engine to enhance the player likeness, movement and ball control. We're not just adding a motion capture component to FIFA. We're helping to redefine the sports gaming experience. Introducing A Modern Player Model FIFA 22 is an authentic sports simulation experience, which has been tweaked in numerous areas to give the game a modern feel. The game engine has been enhanced to provide a more authentic and responsive player experience, generating more speed and accuracy than FIFA has ever seen. A new, more accurate physics model has been developed to reflect the true physicality of football. All players on the pitch will adjust their movement speed and footwork to match their teammates. Players will adjust their forward lean, force of impact and balance on the ball based on the surface, pace of the game and the competition. FIFA 22 will also introduce our 3D Vision technology, which is fully integrated into the engine, and we've created a new game engine based on this technology so that our vision modes can be seen in as much game as possible. Unprecedented Visual Beauty and Imagery Through Motion The
