Using Photoshop To use Photoshop, open an image using Photoshop's standard \_Open dialog box\_. You can access the Open dialog box using any of the following methods:

- * Select an image that is on your hard drive

(such as the one you created in the previous section) in Windows Explorer or in the Finder (Windows) or a similar graphical file manager on Macs. * Browse to the folder where you keep the images you want to edit.

Photoshop can open images from folders on the hard drive as well as from the Web. Photoshop automatically opens the file and creates the first layer (a new layer). Figure 4-2 shows the File

You can work on images that you have imported in the past, or you can start with a new image or with a new canvas. Import the Image

The first step in most projects is to import the image that you want to work with. To import an image into Photoshop Elements: Select File⇒Open. Choose the image that you want to work on. Once you select the image, the File pull-down menu will appear. You can choose from many different image formats depending on the type of project you're working on. The icons above the File pull-down menu provide different ways to work on the image you have selected. The first icon you see is Import. This method of importing the image allows you to add the image to the same canvas that you're working on. By default, the image will appear as a thumbnail. If the image is a high-resolution image, you can see all of the image data in the preview window to the right. This is especially useful if you want to copy the image and paste it into another image editor. Import Directly to Canvas The other icon is to import the image directly to a new canvas. This method allows you to work on a duplicate of the original image. they are loved, I'm reminded of the children who inspire me to be the best I can be. I'm constantly reminded of the presence of those around me. We all have gifts that we share with the world, gifts that are part of us, yet we so easily forget that we have those gifts. We often forget that we have a vital role in showing the children of this community that they are worthy of love and care, that they matter and are valued. My role is to continue to help make this happen. Ruth, a student at Tivoli Middle School, wrote me a beautiful letter filled with determination, eagerness, and love of learning. Her thoughts reflect the eagerness of children who want to learn, reach for the highest goal possible, and understand the things that surround us. These are characteristics of self worth, hopefulness, determination, and
