In order to achieve high efficiency and extensive area coverage, the unit cell has a complex structure, consisting of small, medium and large cell segments. The design of the unit cell is shown in Fig. The anode is an n-type Si substrate and the cathode is a molybdenum trioxide thin film. The high conversion efficiency of the solar cell should be attributed to the large aperture of the patterned unit cell, the intimate contact between the MoO_x and Si active layers, and the effective ohmic contact of the MoO_x with the Si substrate.
