Every signature movement the player executes in-game is directly reflected in game mechanics as a unique signature attribute, giving players unprecedented control over how they play and how they feel in the game. These signature attributes control and shape every part of the player – from their passing, shooting and tackling to their on-ball movement and positioning. Players can now use their movements and body language to create more chances, score more goals and set up more moves. In addition to an upgraded engine, every dribble, pass, shot and tackle has been reworked and updated to suit a motion capture-driven game. But it wasn't until August 8 -- the same day Tillerson was fired as secretary of state -- that Denny actually discussed the idea with Tillerson, the source said. It was at that point that Tillerson was sent in his formal offer to return. The former Exxon Mobil CEO has put out feelers to meet with potential investors to discuss his plans, and last week, he was in China meeting with three potential investors, the source said. When reached by CNN, Tillerson said that he was not actively looking for any job right now, and that he was very happy with his new role at the Atlantic Council. He did say, however, that he was open to the notion
