This pack contains 3 tools including: Data Recovery, Windows Junk File Cleaner and System Optimizer.Q: Python -- is it possible to make integer list of function return type? I'm writing an API for some software, and the API output is in the form of a list of lists. Returning lists of lists means that i'm returning a "bare" list of lists rather than a list of lists of lists, which is what i want. Since a list can have a length of 0, i want to avoid this by making the lists a type rather than a data type. However, i want to return a list of integers (or floats) -- a list of numbers rather than a list of lists of numbers. Is there a way to do this? Something like: return [1, 2, 3] or [1, 2, 3] rather than [[1], [2], [3]] but i want it to be type-safe, and not have to cast at run time, like: return [1, 2, 3].__type__ or return [1, 2, 3].__data__. A: If you want a sequence of numbers you can just use a generator expression: >>> [1, 2, 3] at 0x6a3b6a0> >>> type([1, 2, 3]) Note that you can convert the generator expression to an actual list with the list function: >>> list(range(1, 4)) [0, 1, 2, 3] >>> list(range(1, 4)) [1, 2, 3] >>> type(list(range(1, 4))) >>> type(list(range(1, 4))) Q: Memory leak when caching a class for many requests I'm trying to cache a class for all calls in my app. It's a job class which does some asynchronous work. I'm thinking of using this class as a Singleton: b7e8fd5c8
