I have a repository on all three servers. I want to fetch from Foo to Bar and Bar to Baz. I.e. I want to schedule/perform some actions in a way that each fetch is happening in parallel. Right now the only way I see to solve this is by scheduling three goroutines with time.After. But I'd like to have something elegant and idiomatic as possible. A: Go's semaphores work great for what you're doing. The first example uses a single semaphore, but you could also use a semaphore per remote; each semaphore controlling a goroutine that will fetch from that remote and print the result.

package main import ( "fmt" "time" ) type FetchResult struct { Loc string Remote string Err error } func fetch(rep string) FetchResult { n := make(chan *FetchResult) go func() { defer close(n) result :=
