The resulting diphosphine was then brominated at the 2 position to afford a phosphine oxide, which was characterised and reacted with palladium to yield a series of novel PNP ligands. The resulting PNP ligands were characterised in the examples below using X-ray crystallography, NMR and IR spectroscopy. The new ligands were used to prepare two new and efficient catalytic systems: cross-coupling of aryl halides with aryl chlorides to form biaryls, and Suzuki-Miyaura cross-coupling of aryl bromides with arylboronic acids.Q: Android: How to remember the previously selected item in ListView?
